Mek Wok Mahmud, Ibrahim Bulushi : A Comparative analysis of registration of marriage in Islam: Issues in Contemporary Muslim Jurists before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Comparative analysis of registration of marriage in Islam: Issues in Contemporary Muslim Jurists:

Marriage in Islam plays a significant role in building community. Islam respects a society with strong ties based on Islamic values and ethics. One of those crucial issues related to marriage is the registration of marriage as a requirement for a marriage contract to be recognized and officially authenticated by Muslim countries. This study concludes the officially authenticated registration of marriage as practiced in many Muslim countries. Especially when taking to an account the recommendation on registration of marriages in the resolution 2018 (20) of 1st November 1965 of United Nation Organization general assembly. This is with reference to the personal status law in some Muslim countries concentrating more on the Malaysian personal status laws. Although there is controversy among contemporary scholars regarding Sharah status on this issue, as registration of marriage has no basis among the Sharah requirements for a valid marriage contract, but based on what we have seen, has comfortably fitted into those aspect of Sharah meant for accommodation of contemporary issues. These aspects are deduced from the principles of Islamic jurisprudence.
