Letters, ... Law Defence Association (Classic Reprint):

Excerpt from A Vindication of the Law Prohibiting Marriage With a Deceased Wife's Sister: I. On Social Principles; II. On Scripture Principles; In Two Letters, Addressed to the Dean of Westminster, Chairman of the Marriage Law Defence Association There is one consideration further to which it may be well to call attention, viz., that the translation of Lev. xviii. 18, is not to be confused with its interpretation. Dr. M'caul naturally insists much upon the translation, and in addition to his own critical judgment, allowed to be of great weight from his known eminence as an Hebrew Scholar, he gives many authorities in favour of the rendering as it stands in the text of our authorized version Still it is to be remarked that the authorities whom he cites for the translation are by no means at one with him as to the interpretation. This point will be found very fully treated of in the second letter of the present Lord Chancellor to the Dean of Westminster, printed in and, if I remember rightly, it was also examined and the result put very forcibly by the Bishop of Exeter in the postscript to his letter to the late Bishop of Lichfield, published, I believe, in 1860, where it is observantly noted that of all our Reformers cited by Dr. M'caul as having accepted the authorized version as to the rendering of Lev. xviii. 18, there is not one who has gone with him in the application of it which he advocates, inasmuch as they have all either explicitly or implicitly received our table of prohibited degrees: a proof that even from Dr. M'caul's premiss, as to the translation, they have not come to his conclusion as to the interpretation. And it is plainly in the interpretation, not in the mere translation, that the above-mentioned contradiction is involved.
