George Sherwood : Abandoned Justice: The Cold Case of Ten-Year-Old Virginia Brooks (The Colder Case Series) (Volume 3) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Abandoned Justice: The Cold Case of Ten-Year-Old Virginia Brooks (The Colder Case Series) (Volume 3):

I felt that I was able to get into the actual investigation and was frustrated at times that the police didn't investigate some suspects more thoroughly. However, since this case never had a person arrested and tried, there wasn't as much information available. The author had to rely on newspaper articles. I believe that this case would be solved today with all the modern day forensics and investigative skills available. I think the author did identify the killer and/or killers in his last chapter.

Book 3 of The Colder Case Series covers the similar murder of Virginia Brooks, missing from San Diego. Her body was found in a barren mesa like the bodies of the five little girls near Los Angeles.

From the AuthorIn The Colder Case Series, Uncivil Twilight is the 1925 case about the trial of S.C. Stone for the murders of the Martin sisters in the same area of Los Angeles as Colder Case, about the 1937 case and trial of Albert Dyer for the murders of Melba and Madeline Everett and their friend Jeanette Stephens. Abandoned Justice is a very similar 1931 cold case about the murder of Virginia Brooks in San Diego, which is still unsolved. In the Court of Deadly Assumptions covers another similar 1937 case, the trial of Samuel Elmore for the murder of Joan Kuleba. Lynch Him! deals with the murder of little Geneva Hardman and the efforts to lynch the suspect. There was no intention of writing more than Colder Case, but research revealed too many similar murders of children and they had to be followed. None of these are light reading. They are real cases with gruesome facts as reported in the news and official records. The testimony can be difficult at times and that made these cases more vulnerable to wrongful convictions because of the demand for swift punishment.About the AuthorSherwood was Sr. Mod at TriggerStreet.com for a few years when it launched. It was rewarding to support a noble cause like that. Now he wonders if .com can help find scripts people would like to see as movies.
